(07) that

(10) also

(08) so

Dr Elise Piazza, co-author of the research, said baby talk is a lot more important than we thought. She said: "It is not something to be embarrassed about at all." The researchers recorded 24 different mothers talking to their babies. The babies were aged between seven months and one year. The mothers spoke to their children in 10 different (06) native languages, including English, Spanish, Mandarin, Russian and Hebrew. Dr. Piazza said: "We basically brought mothers into the lab and had them play with and read to their own babies, just like they would at home." She added: "We (7) that that mothers [change the] basic quality of their voices when speaking to infants, and they do (8) so in a [very similar] way across many (9) diverse languages." The study didn't look at fathers' talk, but Pinson said that it is likely fathers would (10) also speak in a similar way across the world.
